Other parents need the clothes you can't use.
Other parents are storing the clothes you need.

It's school time and we are all finding things have been outgrown and we need new things - the best time to trade.

Parent Trading Post provides a connection between parents who have uniforms, shoes, and book bags and parents who need them. You post items you have or need and hook up with others to trade.

Schools with strict dress codes or requiring uniforms put an increased burden on many of us who are already struggling to provide for our families in one of the harshest of economically diminished times.

Point your browser to parenttradingpost.com to see how we can work together.

This is just what it seems to be – a free website for people to trade freely. You will never be asked to pay. You will never see advertising. Parent Trading Post is by and for parents.
